

Unwelcoming European Countries Push Germany Up the Ranks

Although Germany shows no improvement in the attitude towards expats, it now ranks better than most of its neighbors.

- Friendly attitude towards expats: 59%
- Ease of making local friends: 23%
- Expats likely to stay forever: 30%

Munich, 21 March 2018 — For the first time since 2014, Germany has managed to improve its ranking regarding a friendly attitude towards foreign residents: ranking 47th out of 65 destinations in 2017, the country gained seven places since 2016. However, this is not due to an actual change of attitude: in fact, how expats perceive the Germans' attitude towards foreign residents has barely changed at all (59% positive ratings in 2017 vs. 60% in 2016), as the latest Expats Insider survey reveals. Based on the insights of close to 13,000 expats from 188 countries and territories, InterNations, the world's largest network for people who live and work abroad, compiled a so-far unpublished ranking of the world's friendliest countries for foreign residents. Chart-topper Portugal is followed by Taiwan, Mexico, Cambodia, Bahrain, Costa Rica, Oman, Colombia, Vietnam, and Canada.

1 Portugal	9 Vietnam	17 Spain	24 Israel	32 Greece	39 Luxembourg	47 Germany	54 Poland	62 Czech Republic
2 Taiwan	10 Canada	18 Myanmar	25 Malta	33 Nigeria	40 Singapore	48 Norway	55 France	63 Switzerland
3 Mexico	11 Philippines		26 Argentina	34 India	41 Italy	49 Chile	56 United Kingdom	64 Austria
4 Cambodia	12 Peru	19 Romania	27 Kenya	35 Netherlands	42 South Korea	50 Belgium	57 South Africa	65 Kuwait
5 Bahrain	13 Ecuador	20 Thailand	28 Kazakhstan	36 USA	43 China	51 Sweden	58 Hungary
6 Costa Rica	14 Brazil	21 Indonesia	29 Turkey	37 Australia	44 Japan	52 Russia	59 Saudi Arabia
7 Oman	15 UAE	22 Malaysia	30 Ireland	38 Hong Kong	45 Ukraine	53 Qatar	60 Denmark
8 Colombia	16 Uganda	23 Cyprus	31 New Zealand		46 Panama		61 Finland

Germany Far Ahead of Switzerland and Austria

Despite an unchanged attitude towards foreign residents, Germany has moved up seven places since last year, coming in 47th out of 65 destinations worldwide for this factor. The reason for this seeming improvement is, however, a decrease in positive ratings for other European countries such as the UK, Poland, and Hungary, which all rank below Germany now. These countries have lost up to 17 percentage points in terms of positive ratings for the locals' attitude towards foreign residents — this has allowed Germany to climb up the ranks. Moreover, other European destinations such as Norway (ranking 48th),

Sweden (51st), France (55th), Denmark (60th), Finland (61st), the Czech Republic (62nd), Switzerland (63rd), and Austria (64th) assure Germany's position by also placing below it.

Continuously Poor Performance by International Standards

Although Germany might be perceived as relatively friendly compared to some other European destinations, it is still not the right place for expats who would like to meet sociable people. Close to three in five expats (58%) find it hard to make local friends in Germany, compared to only two in five (40%) struggling with this globally. Germans are “distant, reserved, and not very welcoming,” an expat from Poland claims. Many expats seem to agree with this statement as 47 percent describe the Germans as distant and 68 percent as reserved, well above the global average (27% and 40%, respectively).

Top 10 Most Welcoming Countries for Expats

1. Portugal

- Friendly attitude towards expats: 94%
- Ease of making local friends: 58%
- Expats likely to stay forever: 47%

Climbing nine places since 2016, Portugal claims the title of the most welcoming country for expats. “The local population is friendly and helpful,” states an Australian, while a Dutch expat values that “people look after each other” here. In fact, close to four in five expats (79%) describe the Portuguese as welcoming, and about three in ten (29%) state that locals make up most of their social circles (vs. 19% globally).

2. Taiwan

- Friendly attitude towards expats: 86%
- Ease of making local friends: 61%
- Expats likely to stay forever: 30%

Close to three-quarters of expats living in Taiwan agree that the Taiwanese are welcoming (73%) rather than distant (8%). “The people are wonderfully friendly and welcoming to foreigners,” states a US American expat. Maybe it is this friendly attitude that makes it easy for the majority of expats to settle down in the country (74%) and feel at home in the local culture (69%).

3. Mexico

- Friendly attitude towards expats: 87%
- Ease of making local friends: 73%
- Expats likely to stay forever: 39%

Considering how easy expats find it to make local friends in Mexico, it comes as no surprise that 30 percent say their friends are mainly locals. Moreover, four in five expats find it easy to settle down in the country (81%) and to get used to the local culture (80%). A US American expat especially likes “how easy it is to adapt, and the people are incredibly friendly”.

4. Cambodia

- Friendly attitude towards expats: 92%
- Ease of making local friends: 59%
- Expats likely to stay forever: 23%

Moving to Cambodia does not seem to be worrisome for expats: more than four in five find the local population welcoming (85%) and think that it is easy to settle down here (83%). This might be one of the reasons why 39 percent felt at home nearly straight away, which is the highest share across all surveyed countries and more than twice the global average (19%).

5. Bahrain

- Friendly attitude towards expats: 86%
- Ease of making local friends: 55%
- Expats likely to stay forever: 11%

Close to seven in ten (69%) find the Bahrainis welcoming, and another 73 percent feel at home in the local culture. This might be thanks to the lack of a significant language barrier: 91 percent find it easy to live here without speaking the local language. "Bahrain is a beautiful melting pot of many different cultures," states an expat from the USA. In fact, only one percent believes that they will never feel at home here.

6. Costa Rica

- Friendly attitude towards expats: 87%
- Ease of making local friends: 78%
- Expats likely to stay forever: 48%

Out of 65 countries, Costa Rica is the number one destination when it comes to making local friends. This might be due to the fact that 85 percent of expats describe Costa Ricans as welcoming rather than distant (9%), which is 30 percentage points above the global average (55%). Moreover, it might have contributed to more than four in five expats saying they feel at home in the local culture (81%), compared to a global average of 60 percent.

7. Oman

- Friendly attitude towards expats: 86%
- Ease of making local friends: 60%
- Expats likely to stay forever: 12%

"Oman is very expat friendly. The locals are warm and welcoming," says an Indian living in Oman, and most expats in the country seem to agree: close to three-quarters describe the locals as welcoming (73%). Despite that positive attitude, only three percent state to be mainly friends with locals — however, the majority (58%) is part of a quite mixed social circle.

8. Colombia

- Friendly attitude towards expats: 87%
- Ease of making local friends: 62%
- Expats likely to stay forever: 33%

Out of the top 10 most welcoming countries, expats in Colombia are the most likely to be mainly friends with locals (34%). In fact, more than four in five expats describe the Colombians as welcoming (86%) and find it easy to settle down in the country (81%). A US American finds the Colombians "open, warm, and friendly", and an expat from the Netherlands adds that they "are always willing to help".

9. Vietnam

- Friendly attitude towards expats: 83%
- Ease of making local friends: 56%
- Expats likely to stay forever: 16%

More than four in five expats describe the Vietnamese as welcoming (81%), and 73 percent find it easy to settle down in the country. "I love the friendly vibe in the city," states an expat from South Korea about life in Ho Chi Minh, "people are mostly nice and gentle." Despite that welcoming attitude, more than half the expats in Vietnam (51%) plan to stay up to five years at most, which is quite above the global average (35%).

10. Canada

- Friendly attitude towards expats: 81%
- Ease of making local friends: 43%
- Expats likely to stay forever: 45%

Canadians are perceived as welcoming by 62 percent of expats in the country, or as a French expat puts it: they are "open-minded, tolerant, and benevolent". In fact, close to three in ten expats state to be mainly friends with locals (27%), which might contribute to their ease of settling down in the country (70%). Although many expats (45%) find it likely that they will stay forever, the share of expats not yet feeling at home in the country (15%) is the highest out of the top-10 destinations.

The Top 10 Most Welcoming Countries

Portugal, Taiwan, and Mexico top the table when it comes to the friendliness of the local population towards foreign residents, but expats can expect a frosty welcome in Switzerland, Austria, and Kuwait, according to the respondents of the Expat Insider survey.

The Expat Bubble

Expats often struggle to completely adjust to living in another country. But sticking exclusively with the expat community may ultimately prevent you from really understanding and immersing yourself in the local culture. InterNations helps you leave your comfort zone!

Ten Ways to Make a Country Feel Like Home

Before a move abroad, excitement is usually high. You are probably imagining all the great things you will learn at your new job and how they will advance your career. You are probably already dreaming of all the delicious local foods you will get to try and the wonderful friends you are about to make, but then you arrive and feel out of place.

Seven Reasons Why You Aren't Fitting in With the Locals

You took a huge step by moving to a new country! However, it doesn't quite feel like home yet without the right people by your side. Making new friends through cultural barriers can be a struggle, but thankfully there are ways to make it easier.

About the InterNations Expat Insider 2017 Survey

For its annual Expat Insider survey, InterNations asked about 13,000 expatriates representing 166 nationalities and living in 188 countries or territories to provide information on various aspects of expat life, as well as their gender, age, and nationality. Participants were asked to rate 43 different aspects of life abroad on a scale of one to seven. The rating process emphasized the respondents' personal satisfaction with these aspects and considered both emotional topics as well as more factual aspects with equal weight. The respondents' ratings of the individual factors were then bundled in various combinations for a total of 16 subcategories, and their mean values were used to draw up six topical indices: Quality of Life, Ease of Settling In, Working Abroad, Family Life, Personal Finance, and Cost of Living Index. Except for the latter, all indices were further averaged in order to rank 65 expatriate destinations around the world. In 2017 the top 10 were Bahrain, Costa Rica, Mexico, Taiwan, Portugal, New Zealand, Malta, Colombia, Singapore, and Spain.

For a country to be featured in the indices and consequently in the overall ranking, a sample size of at least 75 survey participants per country was necessary. The only exception to this is the Family Life Index, where a sample size of more than 40 respondents raising children abroad was required. In 2017, 65 and 45 countries respectively met these requirements. However, in most countries the sample size exceeded 100 participants.
